A New Development

I am seriously considering moving to Africa to work with Rev. Jackson Mudahinyuka of Kigali, Rwanda. Rev. Jackson has asked me to move there to help him with his ministry which serves over 300 orphans. He asked me this week and we are working out the details of the proposed outreach. Rev. Jackson has been asking me since 2004 to come and help in some way, but the opportunity did not seem timely.

This time he has money and accommodations to assist me in the transition. He wants me to help him write proposals and secure additional funding for his orphans through his ministry and through eBlessings, a non-profit organization.

The plan as it stands now is for me to get there and then register eBlessings in Rwanda. Once registered in Rwanda, Rev. Jackson through eBlessings will be a lynchpin for more funding for Rev. Jackson's organization and potentially for other ministries in the eBlessings' network.

I have to place my household goods in storage, get current of present financial obligations, get a Visa, (Passport is up to date), vaccinations, secure the money for transportation to get there and money for shipping any luggage; with reserve monies kept in a local bank for emergencies, miscellaneous expenses, and the return trip (especially if the return trip is of an emergency nature). I expect to be gone from three to five years.

The plan is for Rev. Jackson to accommodate me with a house to live in and a stipend for working with him from current funding. As things progress, he will give me land to build a children's village for orphan children and a pediatric health center. We will also work on securing additional funding for these projects and write grants and proposals to secure funding for additional projects on which his ministry is currently working or those planned.

There are millions of US dollars earmarked for African issues by the US government and by US philanthropic organizations. A large percentage of those dollars never get spent because there are few US non-profits on the ground in African countries. eBlessings will soon be one of those corporations there with your help.

The financial plan is to raise $20,000 to go there; leaving $10,000 in the bank for the trip back and miscellaneous expenses which may arise while I am gone. I plan to move to Rwanda as soon as my paperwork is complete, the funding is in place and Rev. Jackson is ready to receive me. Thank you in advance for your help. AGAIN THANK YOU FOR EVERY KINDNESS!
